GoAir, IndiGo get more time to replace PW engines

OUR BUREAU

Mumbai, June 1

In a breather to GoAir and IndiGo, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) has extended the deadline for the two airlines to replace all the 60 unmodified Pratt & Whitney (P&W) engines on their A320neo planes by three months.

The earlier deadline was May 31. "About 60 engines are yet to be replaced by the two airlines combined. The obvious reason was Covid-19 impact and the resultant lockdown," said an official requesting anonymity.

"We took a call couple of days back and instructed both the airlines," the official added.

"Supply chains and production lines all got impacted and in turn disturbed the process. Keeping all this in view, we have extended the deadline by 3 months; up to August 31," said the person.

IndiGo has 106 PW powered A320Neo planes in its fleet while GoAir has 43 of them.

Both IndiGo and GoAir remained unavailable to comment.

Independent guidelines

Kumar Rajagopalan, CEO, Retailers Association of India, said, independent guidelines from States have led to multiple interpretations which are severely impacting demand and sales. "There needs to be a uniform standard operating procedures for a part of the reopening process — permission to open stores, time restrictions on store operations; movement of staff and delivery vehicles; production restrictions; the number of staff and customers allowed in a store; or odd/even store restrictions," he added. The association believes a SOP should include
